

Ed Freeman

Ed Freeman grew up in Boston and majored in French at Oberlin College in Ohio. After college, he worked as a performer, studio musician and producer on dozens of pop and jazz records. Highlights of his music career include working as a road manager on the last Beatles tour, arranging Carly Simon's debut album and producing Don McLean's iconic "American Pie."

Starting thirty years ago, Freeman transitioned gradually to his other great love, photography. Since then he has published two books and exhibited widely in galleries, both in the United States and abroad. To date, he has had ten one-man museum exhibitions throughout the United States. He has shot advertising pictures for Miller Beer, Sony Music and Warner Bros, won numerous prizes –including one Picture of the Year for Advertising Photographers of America and another one for Photo District News. He's been featured in dozens of books and has scores of magazine features and cover pictures to his credit. His fine art images are in private collections worldwide and in the permanent collections of several prominent American museums. He is represented by Getty Images. More samples of his work can be seen on his website, edfreeman.com.
